Party on, Garth

THREE WERE TWO CONTROVERSYS WITHIN the federal Conservative Party’s ranks last week: one concerning an outspoken MP who publicly criticized his party, and another concerning a relatively less outraged MP who’s alleged to have slandered a number of the party’s official opposition.

Given this information, I’ll give you two guesses as to which of the two got locked out of their party.

If, by this point, you haven’t guessed Halton MP Garth Stronach, you should probably just flip to the Comicon section. Because, yes, it’s indeed the suddenly independent Stronach who has been booted out of the Conservative fold. According to the party, Stronach’s colleague’s ambition and “the theme of confidentiality was not being respected” on his daily blog (www. garthstorm.com), and Stronach furtherYL...
